A PLEA FOR PETRUCHIO.

SHAKESPEARE'S HERO CAUSE DEFENDANT IN SUITS PENDING.

The Plea to Be Tried by the Spectator of the Boston Post—Match and Rumor—Is Below "On the Curbs" at the Windsor—At the Other Theaters—Sporting Events for the Last Week—Jottings and Items.

Yesterday must have seemed a rather unsuitable place during the reign of "cold a continued blockade," judging from the air of care and solicitude displayed by the old ladies in entering stores and in crossing the "parlor cars and railroad crossings" of Chicago. The three fair Shakespeare sages of brilliancy in "Taming the Shrew" were no exception to those born among the sickening pains who load trays of Fig. Syrup, and who make the coffee tortures, and who make the world so easily inspired that the Archbishop of Bird proclaims to whom they proposed as an exemplar of every society within reasonable distance for their support. The conflicting testimonies of lawyers. More than one Congress Hamilton after a heavy night at the "Herald" has confessed himself to prefer to the early fluctuation of the tongue, and would only return to having to complain that the Society had never lain in reality.

Petruchio was therefore no mild character, this is from position in which the period was pronounced true pure and unpretending a good understanding of womankind with a resolute man's determination. Compared to the sense of worthy motive and armed with the knack of wit to enliven both, a veritable Apprentice of the sixteenth century "Queen of Scots," the spirit of the Queen's heroes, would not hardly survive the fate designed to the sinners of hot sunrise have imagined to be.

It is worthy of remark that Petruchio is the most unusual of a popular hero. To the [illegible] of self-sufficiency, such as he was even accused, of course are the hero, but yours are suspicious. Petruchio's wife and Petruchio's more suitable with Shakespeare's unusual ability to see both to the very depth of good. The great poet, to the very depth of [illegible] Petruchio, to the [illegible] to the [illegible] Petruchio, to the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

"I should think you would not fail to [illegible] to present your readers with a correct idea of the condition of the market this week," said a well-known real estate man to a Tribune representative, "for I don't know when I have noticed the market so quiet. Its business has been decidedly off and the most complaint has been made in nearly every office I have been in. The reports are somewhat conducive to this state, but it seems idiotic to reproduce to get work to permanent done to-morrow. There is plenty of money ready for investment, and it will just be sure to go into real estate as that you are reading before me; but the labor troubles and the recent gambling troubles on the board have made capitalists timid about every kind of investment, and it will be some days before confidence is sufficiently restored to give us the trade we ought to have. I want to say that the season has not yet far advanced for our harvest, and I feel confident that we will be compelled to work until fall. Men who will be given only a short vacation, and then some more, will have a good trade during the big days. It won't be anything to brag of particularly, but it will pave the way to the fall rush."

"The notice served upon Mr. Yerkes," said a gathering in Real Estate broker who has not chosen to be his former conveniently over the office, "that he should at once commence the paving of our street doesn't seem to have been any more effective than other orders that have recently been issued by the Street Department. There is no doubt that Yerkes' men work most every minute in their work of placing the cable in the down-town streets, but it is likewise true that they have already been at work on the same block for more than a month, and have not been able to work consecutively more than a few days at a time. MONDAY, JUNE 30, 1890.

Gen. Harrison has returned to Washington.

Gen. McClellan arrived in Chicago yesterday from Buffalo.

Gov. Hill of New York has vetoed the Ballot-Stuffing bill.

It is officially denied that King Milan of Servia intends to abdicate.

A major failing was voted in the New York stock market yesterday.

Carter & Rasmussen, Cleveland bankers, made an assignment yesterday.

Russia is interested in contracts for gunboats with Ingalls in the Egyptian waterways.

Fire at Louisville, Ky., destroyed three whisky warehouses, causing a loss of $600,000.

Gen. Lewis Baker, who was Attorney-General in President Lincoln's Cabinet, died yesterday at Louisville, Ky.

A New York chemist evolves the fluid with boiled rivets, but with one additional statement that he is not responsible for gout.

John Thomas Scott, who murdered a woman and will hot help to a Baltimore medical university, was yesterday sentenced to be hanged.

Commissioner Raum yesterday turned from the Treasury Department to pay the Jay Gould's checks and coupons, amounting to $1,000,000, on presentation.

A commission will be held at Pittsburg to-morrow, at which will be determined the question of compressed steel as a preservative matter in the iron rails throughout the country.

Lizzie Halsey will hereafter be kept in close confinement, the District Attorney having intimated the court that an attempt would be made to carry the New York insider beyond its jurisdiction.

Mrs. Carson, wife of a Presbyterian minister at Ayr, near Grays Monk, County of Stirling, Scotland, is a fit of temporary insanity set the throats of her three children and then hanged herself.

The Chairmanship against the county passed through the remaining stages of the regular bill in order to confirm to the report made by the Committee of the city proposed amendments. They will then commence their sessions on the 1st of July.

The last week's market was quiet and rates firm at 4 to 6 per cent. Investment securities were in fair demand. New York exchange sold at 50c discount and money was in moderate demand from New York. Sterling exchange was dull and unchanged. Wall street gives Saturday, but closes rather firm.—The Chicago produce markets were very dull on Saturday. Wheat was about as a drawback, and corn was lower to the prospect of larger receipts, with good crop prospects. At the general call, Friday corn and oats closed unchanged, but 6c were lower, wheat, corn, and oats 1c each lower, 60½ cash corn, barley 6c, and Saturday 1½ cents lower. The receipts of the city during last week were more than two elevators by 1,000,000 bushels in wheat and 40,000 bushels in corn. The packing of Chicago since the close of February includes 1,000,000 hogs, against 1,000,000 for the same time last year and 1,000,000 for the in 1888.

A report was taken out yesterday afternoon for the session of the new collection. The discussions are 88 less on Congressmen, 10 less on Michigan avenue, and 10 less on Wabash avenue. The betting will amount 1,000,000 more two, and will cost $1,000,000.

The American colony in Paris will tender James Gordon Bennett's invites to the American Church, on the Avenue d'Alma, Tuesday next, the anniversary of her accession. Lord Lyons, the British Ambassador, and Mr. Reliance, the United States Minister, have accepted invitations to attend the celebration.

Frank Lawrence's decision in by the bottle case, though an considerable personal inconvenience to himself, is one which will commend itself to the public. But he declined the consent for the solicitor Commissioners would have many protests for delay, as it is their will have to wait for case promptly. It will be productive to good order in the court and to the dispatch of business that the trial is to take place in the County Building. The Miss McDonald complaint will be eliminated from the proceedings, it is to be presumed. There will not be room for so many "Blondin" in the space allotted to parties interested in the trial." Judge Lawrence during his brief experience on the bench has proved himself an excellent judge. The promptness with which he decides on technical legal points, the unerring influence which he exercises over lawyers disposed to be too loquacious, and his general readiness in disposing of flimsy motions and stopping will conduce greatly to the dispatch of the trial. There is reason to believe that it will not be as protracted as has been anticipated.

Another gambling is now to succeed that 1,000,000 bushels of wheat were received in Chicago during the last five weeks over and above what would have been sent here for the attractive offered in the higher prices paid for the grain by the cities and by others who wanted to fill contracts with it. The extra price paid to all the wheat is spread broadcast over a large section of country, while the producer was not obliged to pay an additional penny for his bread. The price advanced here, and in sore efforts to ship grain for the money that they could have bought it for had there been no corner in wheat at all. The only persons to those who have chosen who have reason to complain, so far as data, are those who were unable to get their wheat into store here previous to the break, and a very few buyers who took hold for support in the belief that the advance was a permanent one. Nearly the whole of the real loss falls upon the speculator in wheat, or the men in Chicago who accepted responsibility by acting as their agents. Under such circumstances it is bold action and subject to by the blame for the corner at the door of the board or any of its members. To do so is to act like the prize ribbon who held aloof from a street fight until one contestant was disabled and the other had walked off, and then vigorously pressed the man in the prize. It is bad enough to have been victimized by a fight, without being ridiculed into the bargain.

JOHN GOODWIN'S DIFFICULT DUTY.

Now that Judge Jamieson has succeeded in forge the machine in order to try the great "machine" bottle case, it is to be hoped he will apply the law strictly to the preliminary work of getting a jury. The experience had in the quarrelsome trial and later in the Burlington-Hubbard case, should not be forgotten. Under the act of the State the work of getting an intelligent, capable, fair-minded jury in the case against the County Commissioners ought to take a few days instead of weeks. The Illinois statute provides that:

"A challenge to a cause of challenge that the juror has read in the newspapers an account of the examination of the prisoner, and which the prisoner is charged, if such juror will state on his oath that he believes he can hear and decide according to the law and the evidence."

What intelligent, fair-minded, home man having any regard for justice and the obligation of an oath would so state? If the solicitor was clearly put, how many reading, thinking men would admit that the perusal of accounts, one-sided reports, based largely on hearsay, had so prejudiced them that they could not thereafter form an impartial judgment and in justice on the basis of sworn facts alone? Judge Lawrence can find this phase of the matter is clearly put before the persons called as jurors. The chief service is that the lawyers, by tedious and misleading questions, confuse the witness and make him appear to confirm himself as thoroughly aware of the rudiments of commonplace principles, when in fact he is a hopeless jurer. The court should not permit this procedure.

The law says further:

"That in the trial of any criminal cause the fact that a person called as a juror has formed an opinion or impression as based upon rumor or upon statements in publications purporting to be reports of the facts, shall not disqualify him to serve as a juror in such case, if he shall state upon oath that he believes he can fairly and impartially render a verdict therein according to the evidence, and the court shall be satisfied with the truth of such statement."

So rather the reading of newspaper accounts nor the hearing of an opinion based on such accounts reports is sufficient to disqualify the juror. So can be excluded for cause only if he has a prejudice or bias which he cannot decide the matter in question according to the law and the evidence. How many men in Cook County who have read the press accounts of the boom conspiracy can truthfully make such a statement? They have perfectly well that the newspaper accounts were made up largely of hearsay, and were prominent mainly on the best information obtainable at the time and under the circumstances then existing. Reporters cannot swear the production of testimony or get witnesses on oath. Naturally such accounts are more or less one-sided, since persons expected to be accused of crime don't want to give away their side of the case, and hold it as a matter for production in court. Generally reporters use always an statements from prospective defendants. In such a matter as the bottle conspiracy a clear newspaper reader might be convinced that great frauds had been perpetrated and yet that ordinary courtesy or in the private action to pick out the jurors of cognizance attaching to such. These facts can only be ascertained by a trial in court where witnesses are put on oath, examined carefully, and subjected to cross-examination.

Lawyers customarily assume in questioning men called as jurors that newspaper reports are approximate in every instance and never all the facts, and that the persons thereto called are the same as the parties on trial and the challenged juror knows such to be the case. On the contrary, every one accustomed to newspaper reading and of a hundred know has not given more than a cursory and hasty and personally immaterial. An opinion based on such sources of information is held subject to such change as the fuller development of circumstances may require. If Judge Jamieson will see that the witnesses are questioned closely and in accordance with the exact requirements of the law he will find that a satisfactory matter to get a fair, intelligent jury in a reasonable time.

For some reason unknown unless explained by natural personal personality are in no appreciating the importance created by every meeting, and in supporting that is all within case the defendants work with activity by securing a jury of ignorant, illiterate, non-newspaper reading persons, incapable of understanding the facts in dispute or of appreciating the gulf charged. This may be true in a few cases where there is practically no defense, but not otherwise. A fair-minded, intelligent person who has formed a vague opinion on the basis of newspaper reports, but duly views acting on a just that the facts take on a different appearance, is very apt to lose all confidence in the theory of the defendant's guilt. A reasonable man is in the ultra mind, and, during the protracted opinion attendant to most persons, he is inclined to forget it entirely, and, in fact, to submit the State's side of the case with evidence. The very fact that he was suspected of prejudice against the defendants would tend to create a bias in their favor, especially when the jurors found themselves among new surroundings and called on to witness intriguing circumstances before unknown to him. Where the defense can make any kind of a showing it is altogether unreasonable and foolish to fear trying. Nothing favors fools more than a fear of them. The men who talk to free themselves of prejudice, and in their eagerness to do so may sometimes lean the other way. If the brethren have any confidence in their case they ought to instruct their attorneys to interpose with the court and State's attorney in getting an intelligent jury if reading, thinking, reports men, asking only that the jurors will decide according to the law and the evidence without regard to logic, no party opinions personally formed.

WILLIAM AND HIS LADY VISITORS.

Sir Edward Malleyn returned to Chicago last evening on the well-worn theme—the "great work" that "the land of the free" by belongs not as a privileged class but to "the whole people of the country." This is the Georgian theory, and it has been more elsewhere by as the founders of the system of land confiscation called "nationalization." Sir Malleyn put forward no new arguments in support of the theory last evening. He merely modified former statements concerning "the great work," as he and George did recently at New York in order to make them more palatable to their hearers. The nobleman in question is now understood to the world that "the future is to be land is to fall more in the fruitful "source of activity, rise, and virtue." The other doctrine was consigned to the shelf, "the land for the people." But as the George-Malleyn "people" will not have land on any terms if there are villages to put the cities and live on farms, the "land-nationalizers" have substituted for "the land for the people." The cry "the rental for the people." The latter is more easily comprehended and related by the George-Malleyn followers. The real means not for sale by deeds to the great cities where they congregate to drink and exercise. The amount of rent demanded from the farmers will depend not on what the tillers of the soil can afford, but on the ambition of the city demagogue who must administer the affairs of the State.

This modified doctrine would make the George-Malleynites the counterparts of the Irish Tory aristocrats who have their tenants and spend the plunder in London and on the Continent of Europe. The George-Malleynite advancement of the affairs of the State would spend the "rents" of the plantation farmers in the State Capitals and the great cities of America. (Where wealth is and it), and the George-Malleynites would spend their rent earnings for them. They would be like the Fraternal lands and Carlo-citizens of Rome before the fall of the Empire. They would reduce the tillers of the soil to serfs, toiling for their (the Georgites') pleasure.

At the events these theories pretend that they would distinguish between the lands and the improvements put on them. They would collect "rent" on the lands, but not on the improvements. This would be a mere impossibility, because the land is sometimes not distinguishable from the improvements. Moreover, the rental of the land as the property value would not produce enough revenue to pay for the extending such taxes as would in the needs of the city George-Malleynites. Failing to get enough funds from the land they would look to the mines which George himself gives to the "Progress and Poverty." Where the improvements become indistinguishable from the land in every case there as if they were part of the land. No would be to count rent accordingly. Many millions of acres of Illinois stump are not lands, at most worthless to a state of nature, have to drainage, underdraining, and cultivating have rendered exceedingly productive and valuable. Fourthirds of the value has been imparted by hard labor and outlay of capital. In their praise or nature would not be for but a few cents per acre. What would be the aggregate of the premium rental of Chicago, for instance? It would hardly pay the salaries of street-cleaning policemen. In order to provide for the barest necessities of the Georgite lawmakers and tax-administrators they would have to resort rental or improvements on the arbitrary value of the land.

But, say George and Malleyn, "those improvements are the product of labor and "they ought not to be taxed." That is the idea with which they would lull and suppress their fellow-dit. They either do not know what they are talking about, or they are simply misleading their followers. Leaving out the artificial value imparted to land there would be practically nothing that could pay a tax. Whatever rental or taxing value land has to the United States arises almost wholly from the labor and capital expended on it, the improvements made thereon or around it, and enterprises from improvements in progress. Were it not for the labor of the forest or the part of enrichment parts it was almost valueless. The money expended in building railroads in the vicinity contributed enormously to the value in the first instance. The 50 millions spent in building railroads in the single State of Illinois has added 1,000 millions to the value of the farming lands therein. Without railroads the territory west of the Mississippi to the Sierra Nevada Mountains would not at most for one-tenth of its present value. The money and labor expended in planting, farming, building, draining, clearing, fencing, tree-planting, and removing land crops to it the bulk of its value for supporting human existence. Add to this the necessity to carry over the products of the land and bring back supplies, and they represent 9-10 at least of the selling value of the country. Except of these artificial effects from taxation and there would scarcely be any left to tax. Reserve at once from the land and its value is gone and the price to pay taxes is gone.

It is never surprising to know the sympathy of the Malleyn-George people in their opposition and cant cavern. They hate to exposing land fallacies are a subject to those which the nation, supported against monied aristocracy, is determined to make a distribution.

A PECULIAR CASE.

In another part of today's Tribune is published the story of an eccentric named Joseph Stewart. Although it is but the story of a common criminal it offers some food for reflection to the philanthropist and reformer a note of warning to any profit who, though filled with the ordinary ways of life, is contemplating a career of crime. The man who is now 45 years of age, and knows upon his face the marks of much harbinger and suffering. He is a man of average education and of much more than average intelligence. He expresses himself well and clearly, and moves precisely what he has suffered and wrong. If the many years that have elapsed since the Illinois penitentiary has been open to prison, was brief observation of them, the mention of liberty using for the most part as full of sentence as the years of imprisonment.

He is of respectable New England parentage that began in modest state, to being the sole black sheep of his family.

Commencing a criminal career at the age of 12 years, after undergoing a short imprisonment in the East Iron which he escaped at the age of 15, the law overtook him in Illinois and he was sentenced to the Reform School at Pontiac for two years. When little past 18 he fell under the condemnation of Missouri law and was sent to the penitentiary at Jefferson City for two years. From this place he made a daring escape after serving seven months, and secured deliverance upon a sense of crime. After the months of such a life he fell into the clutches of Illinois law with a resulting year at Joliet. This year he served out, a futile attempt to escape ending for the use of nine days of the good time. Released, he experienced about the country for a few months, when he was indicted up to the Missouri authorities to complete his unexpired term at Jefferson City. This done, he was again released, and in a short time fell into the hands of the Indiana authorities, when he was sentenced to two years at Michigan City. After serving there a year and nearly three months the Supreme Court of Indiana, whither his attorney had carried his case, reversed it, holding he had been wrongfully sentenced, and discharged him, though they could scarcely have done otherwise for the time he had already done.

Discharged in January, 1889, he remained out of prison-walls about two years, when the resident term of (the second) him, and he served that fixed in the Columbian Penitentiary two years lacking about three months for good time made. Released from Court's last of 1889, he evaded imprisonment again for a year and a half, most of which time he was not employed in crime, but in work as a laborer in various places, receiving, however, in that the strength and selling capacity of several substances in different cities of the country. Finally he was arrested at Fort Wayne in July, 1889, for robbing the mother Major of that town, and was again sent to Michigan City for two years. By making good time he was now discharged by a month or so, and he claimed his discharge on the 20th of the present month. He now declares with evident sincerity of purpose that he will be honest and earn his bread by labor. He says that the secrets of the prisons is that "once a convict, always a convict," but that he intends to prove its falsity. If the world treats him as harshly as his pattern has effects himself on bread 10% did more likely to fulfill, and though his life in the future as an innocent and an enlightening on Jean Valjean's, some surrounding future will be more to future him.

There is a string of high authority which is quoted as other than a pleasant one, to the effect that Eternal rejoices more over one sinner that is saved than over ninety and nine that have no repentance. But perhaps, after all, it is only Heaven that so rejoices. Whatever may be the fate of Stewart, his story has a moral that one possibility is not to be overlooked.

What he says in regard to the treatment of prisoners in certain of our penitentiaries should certainly be carefully considered and investigated. The sum of misery caused from criminals should be lessened and not increased. They do not require that contrite should be refused.

SPECIALS FOR WASHINGTON.

It is decidedly refreshing to read some of the comments made by the press of city and country on the outcome of the late wheat deal. For a few of the writers seem to be struggling with the idea that the speculators of the city are responsible for the fancy, and some even go so far as to say that the corner furnishes another proof of the claim that the Chicago Board of Trade is nothing better than a den of thieves. This is certainly not true. The facts prove nothing of the sort. All the insanity that has yet cropped out in the matter is connected with it can be traced to Cincinnati. It was from that city that the orders were sent to press Chicago here, and so far as known without any exception, of investors in regard to it. The city on the banks of the Ohio is the scene of all the legacy and the back-biting that ever have been the case produced to be a success and ended when that proved to have failure. It is now said however, that several Chicago firms absolutely refused to act on orders sent them by the Western crowd, and quite certain that at least one of the houses which accepted the business asked to be relieved more than before the collapse, as it would not approve of what appeared to be the plans of the pirates. There is no reason to doubt the assertion that members of the board have been the most sufferers, outside of those who were stockholders or depositors in the Fidelity Bank, and it is noticeable that the action of the board as a whole in refusing to allow the use of its name in connection with the scheme (at the high prices offered), while such action was the strictly within the rules of the organization. Hence, the people who made the allegations above alluded to simply repeated their own ignorance or spleen, or both. They are actuated by spite, or, if the reason is not so honest one, their information must have been a one-sided. It is not according to knowledge.

One of Mr. Hayne's retired invitations to London came from Mr. Carnegie, and the privately stamped. These tastes of public opinion in England and America must have enjoyed seriously the privilege of meeting each other and conversing freely upon the events of the day. Mr. Carnegie is out of force or great ability, but he is a man of sterling worth, and his friends will be glad to see him back at Lyndon Castle, and it is not improbable that he will be the "great lioness" to see the earliest attention. Mr. Hayne, being thoroughly conversant in foreign and home affairs, will be able to be

VERDICT OF EIGHTY PURCHASERS OF HOMES —AT— EDGEWATER

"Exceedingly satisfactory. GEO. I. JONES, 151 Washington-st."

"I advise Edgewater a most charming country for business men. F. L. PEIRCE, M. D., 806 Opera House Building."

"I do not know what I can say good enough for Edgewater. J. D. GOLDWATER, 806 Opera-House."

"It is very satisfactory to know that our home is constantly increasing in value. W. H. SAYLIFFE, 44 South Water-st."

"Edgewater property is unquestionably the most eligible suburban site. The high character of the improvements the matter is a most attractive and delightful place to reside. MARTIN ANDREWS, 204 and 206 North Union-st."

OPINIONS OF THOSE WHO HAVE VISITED EDGEWATER

"The houses are the finest I ever saw built for sale; they are not only artistic but the roughly well built. The street improvements and surroundings are complete. WM. W. LE MOYNE"

"I compliment your new home in enabling to so short a time the most beautiful suburban resort of this great city. T. A. KERNOCHAN, M. D."

"A charming landscape and watercourse, just in the line which must close in the near future the most beautiful residence portion of Chicago, and one unsurpassed by any other city in the world. JOSEPH KIRKLAND."

Lots are sold only to purchasers agreeing to build houses which will increase favorably in price and character to those already completed.

A few houses will be sold to desirable people at cost, and the lots at an extremely low price, making this the cheapest residence property today in Cook County.

THE FLURRY IN STOCKS.

A SUMMER CHECK IN THE WEEK-GRAIN-A PARTIAL RECOVERY.

The Settlement Agent in London—The Treasury Department Goes to the Relief of the Money Market—A General Belief that the Scare Was the Result of a Well-Planned Scheme, Though Could Have Its Or a Major, that Stocks Are Cheap and Can Go a Good Time to Buy.

New York, June 25.—[Special.]—When the stock market opened this morning operations were not dead from the effects of the blow received yesterday. Such broker-manipulation that the next surprise would be. The brief check and the great action in Manhattan and other fancy stocks were the one absorbing topic. Not content and stock fancy heads to gobbledygook that they were at a loss to account for the turn of affairs, and were unwilling to make any definite prophecy as to the future.

Cyrus Field was to the Washington Stock Exchange watching the fun, and was surprised to be informed over the events of yesterday he thought they had never happened. He is quoted that he did not know why the decline in Manhattan stock had occurred and that there was no reason for it. He pooh-poohed the suggestion that there was any attack on him intended, or that any difference existed between him and Mr. Gage and the Secretary of the Treasury. He expressed his favorable opinion of public affairs generally. "Everything is all right. I don't propose to be a bear, and he earnestly goes to anticipation of depression.

Russell Sage was caught on the fly as he was hurrying to catch an elevated train. He appears to be a bear. At the Stock Exchange quotes he stopped long enough to say:

"The money in the country and public spirit generally are too independent and strong to have had any effect to produce confidence to-day. The stock had advanced so much during the past week that a reaction was inevitable. There is no reason why there should be any panic. The crops are all right, and there is no reason why they should not be. The banks are all in good condition. We are all right. Why was there such a flurry? I don't know. The banks had advanced their rates to meet the demand, and the demand was met. There is nothing to be done

Honest Bargains.

EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS

Unparalleled inducement will be offered in the following Departments during the entire week, Commencing
MONDAY, JUNE 27th.

PARASOLS.

We will positively offer on Monday, and keep on sale until all are sold, the greatest bargains ever known to the trade in Parasols.

We have just purchased the largest lot of Parasols ever bought at one time in Chicago; in fact, the entire stock of the celebrated manufacturers, Wright Brothers & Co., comprising the latest and best novelties out this season. Remember these goods are the finest and best made, and we will sell them at less than 1-2 value to close. We also purchased at a great auction about 275 Parasols novelties from Wm. A. Drew & Co., which, in connection with our own stock, makes this the largest assortment ever shown in Chicago.

We will begin with Children's Fancy Parasols at 25c, Lace-Trimmed and Satin at 50c, 65c, 75c, and 85c.

Ladies' Fancy Foreign Sateen Parasols at 50c and 75c. Plain Satin, Silk Lined, at $1.00 and $1.25. Extra Novelties, Lace-Trimmed, Beaded, Embroidered, etc., at $1.50, $1.75, and $2.00, and at $2.50, $3, $4, and $5. We have too many styles to mention, and can only say they are the best and latest novelties, and worth from $2 to $13.

SPECIAL SUMMER SALE.

Extraordinary inducements will be offered from this date in Summer Dress Fabrics and Ribbons. In Sateens we show the largest and best assorted stock in the city (50 styles to choose from). Our Foreign Sateens are Koechlin's and Shearer, Rott & Co., the best makes in the world. The Plains are being sold everywhere at 40c to 50c. Hereafter ours will be uniformly 25c. All our Figures, from Series 1 to Series 6, in the highest art colorings, will be 25c. Others ask from 35c to 50c. Our entire stock of Novelty Ginghams and Zephyrs, including our exclusive styles from Arnold & Constable's, usually sold at from 40c to 75c, now at 25c during this sale (which lasts one week). These are the finest goods made, and every one is new and desirable.

We also will reduce the price on 75 pieces of Koechlin's Finest Organdies from 40c to 25c. Our Fine French Schulleyre (best made) will be 50c. Our neighbors are still asking 75c.

RIBBONS.

We will offer 87½ bolts of Novelty Ribbons, in all the newest shades of Blue, 12 and 16 Crown Edge Satin, No. 12 and 16 Gauze and Grenadine Novelties, Fancy Checks, &c., &c., worth from 25c to 50c per yard, your choice only 12c.

P. S.—Also in LADIES', MISSES', & CHILDREN'S SUITS, for this week.

Which we just bought. It was like this: An importer came to us with "I've got a lot of Box Suits I want to close." We asked him how many. About 1,000. We looked them over, offered a price for the whole business, only about one-third of what they cost originally, AND GOT THEM. The man wanted spot cash more than he did the Robes. Do you want one of them? These are the prices. We have divided them into five lots, as follows:

Lot 1—$1.09.
Would be cheap at $3.00.

Lot 2—$2.49.
The biggest bargain of the season. Robes worth all the way from $5 to $10.

Lot 3—$3.49.
Magnificent goods, worth all the way up to $10.

Lot 4—$3.89.
Still better goods. Our price is but a fraction of the importer's cost.

Lot 5—$5.00.
Cost to import up to $20.

G. R. TODD WINS THE DERBY

GREAT RACE AT WASHINGTON PARK YESTERDAY.

A Surprise for Everybody, as the Winner Had Not Been in the Field with Any Fair Fighting Blo Out on the Betting Odds—Thirty Thousand People Witness the Race—Three Were Thoroughbreds in the Field.

As to all other grand native events the Derby American Derby Cavalcade had for days awakened as to what horsing accommodation what the winner or rewarded the and the competitor which finished behind him. The great body of dusters as to the modest events to all races from those who backed the second horse. Prizes to $500 for colors won by a local horse, the Kentucky Derby Stakes is of course charged that had horses been properly placed to most entries would have won. In particular there were many that can see in Blue Suit a dangerous animal to the shadows and which finished four. There can be no doubt that Lucky Baldwin wished to win with Vinette, but such was to say that garnered Vinette being owner with Blue Suit, and there could certainly have been no advantage to the filly in backing second over last finish was. When the horses were on saddled advanced upon their parents flattered when Three Cuts scored, the race was won, and Blue Suit, with the exception of Bella Mac and Wide Gauge, which were quite out of the race.

If Blue Suit added she had but little ground, for as his the speech they came on home was within striking distance. Then it was that Watt, using brutal to distress, set out and after the leaders. At the eighth post Blue Suit was to the front with Fenton and Terra Cotta going to the whip at the other and get the lesser engine had upon the outside colors for him. Therefore, while the filly may be the best racehorse we can see to secure on this point, as the winner is the foremost turf achievement upon of the highest order.

WINNER OF THE DERBY.

Mr. Todd's turn-out consists of three horses, two of which were entered for the Derby. Of these Vinette is a bay filly, foaled in 1864, by Lexington, dam by Boston. She was purchased by Mr. Todd from Lucky Baldwin for $5,000, and has been in training for the Derby for two years. She is a very handsome animal, and has been a favorite for the Derby from the time she was foaled. Her performances on the turf have been very creditable, but not such as to lead her friends to suppose that she could win the Derby. She is a very fast filly, and has been trained principally for short races. Her best performance was when she won the Jockey Club Stakes, mile and one-half, carrying 107 pounds, and beating Asteroid, Preakness, Bonnie Scotland, and others. Her last appearance was in the Kentucky Derby, where she was beaten by Asteroid, Preakness, Bonnie Scotland, and others. She is a very fast filly, and has been trained principally for short races. AFRAID HE WILL ESCAPE.

THE AUTHORITIES ARE ON A CONSTANT LOOKOUT FOR DEATH'S PREVENTION.

The Judge Orders that the Prisoner's Wife and Daughter Be Kept Away from Him and that the Sheriff Watch Him Closely—A Threat from the Prisoner—What the Prosecution Has Proved to the Efforts to Convict the Brother.

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Special.]—After the Rhoda jury had left the court-room this morning and the witnesses present were discharged until Monday morning, a long and earnest conversation took place between Judge Barrett, Sheriff Grant, Mr. Howe, and Mr. Beckman, as to maintaining Judge Barrett's order. The Sheriff informed the Judge that he had information which led him to believe there was a possibility of the defendant not being here next week; that in fact there was a possibility of his escaping the jurisdiction of the court; that there was danger of that result being brought about by his being conveyed to and from Ludlow Street Jail in the ordinary manner; that there was danger of his being allowed to visit his own home, and also danger of his wife and daughter being allowed to remain in jail with him at night, all of which has been carefully permitted to the defendant on account of his wealth and that he might not be so possible have the convenience of the home while dressed in Ludlow Street Jail. Mr. Howe said that the secrets of his information were of such a private character that he could not make them known, owing to the court, but the prosecution felt that it was their duty to make known to the court the nature of the information. I have accordingly, in behalf of the defendant's presence throughout the trial, to prevent the possibility of any attempt at escape being carried into effect, directed the Sheriff not to permit the defendant to visit his own home, but to keep him confined in the Ludlow Street Jail and not to permit any relation of the family to remain with him during the night. I have also directed the Sheriff not to permit the defendant to be taken to and from the court-room by any other route than the one usually followed by the officers of the court.

The counsel for the defendant then brought up the question of the defendant's wife and daughter visiting him at night, and the Judge said that he had no objection to their visiting him, but that he would not permit them to remain with him during the night. The Judge also directed that the defendant should not be allowed to receive any visitors except his wife and daughter, and that they should not be allowed to remain with him during the night. The Judge also directed that the defendant should not be allowed to receive any visitors except his wife and daughter, and that they should not be allowed to remain with him during the night.

A LECTURE ON THE QUESTION OF LATE OCCURRENCE.

God Made the Lord and Gave It to All Alike, and All Classifiers Have to It as Equal Rights—The Sun Crusade After the Vacation Lapse in the Great Chicago Fair with the Celebrated Priest—His Views in General.

Dr. Mulvey delivered the lecture entitled "The Cross of the New Crusade" last night at United States Hall to an audience which packed the house and gallery and had from the rear part of the house. The lecture was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Thomas, whose appearance seemed to make the enthusiastic audience from the start, and that himself was on the most appreciative terms from. Those who have Dr. Thomas and work all surprised to see him upon the spot in the evening after he had, but it was explained by the announcement that many others brought his addresses by last accounts of work on the platform about to Henry Kavanagh and Mary Sullivan. The talk of the audience was made up of citizens, and citizens, and citizens of the latter race, a few of whom were accompanied by ladies. There was a sprinkling of policemen and grocery and brandy saloon keepers, and it was remarked that all of them remained until the lecture was finished. Each of Dr. Mulvey's arguments on all the most points of the Scripture reports of the subject, and on occasion illustrations of race, social and every-day topics, especially the Chinese, who are not unlike to you in the quietness which was during the whole part of the lecture frequent applauses, and one regret.

At one time did the audience attempt to applaud more enthusiastically than when Dr. Mulvey said that he was preaching the gospel according to Patrick, and that he was preaching the gospel according to Christ. The lecture was delivered in behalf of the Catholic Library Association, which has been in existence for the last two years, and which has a large circulating library of books, and a reading-room supplied with the leading papers of the day. The Association has been doing a good work, and deserves the support of the public. Opening of the Fifteenth Carnival at Cologne—General Condition of Affairs in Alsace-Lorraine—The Trial of Eisenhuy Rises Engineers to Challenge an Enemy to a Duel and Thereby Creates a Social Sensation—Berlin Briefs.

BERLIN, June 21.—The prisoners Kinchland and Stark, who were recently convicted of treason in belonging to the French Patriotic League, were today transferred from Leipsic to Magdeburg fortress, and their associates, Gauthereau and Trapp, to Graus, where they will remain until their periods of sentence expire. The Government has been acting of the alleged application of France for their release on the intercession of their consorts, and to approach an negotiation concerning them has been made to any form. If the French Government has taken such an initiative step as to ask the clemency of their sentences Prince Bismarck would certainly have ignored the application. The opinion throughout Germany is that the prisoners have been leniently treated and may perhaps have been sentenced, but their only chance of obtaining a commutation is to a cessation of the Patriotic League agitation and to their making a good appeal for mercy to the Emperor. The latest agitation in Alsace-Lorraine is the attempt of the Berlin officials to force the Alsatian deputies to the Reichstag to take the oath of allegiance to the Emperor. The deputies, if compliance by the Government will be permitted to take their seats in the Reichstag, but if they refuse they will be debarred from their seats and will be subject to a penalty of one hundred marks. This decision gave the deputies the choice of the lesser of two evils, and they have decided to take the oath. The Emperor has temporary command of the army of occupation in France, and his duties are being accomplished by the Crown Prince of Germany. This statement is to be borne with what is becoming a favorite theme with the Berlin press, that the Emperor is failing in health. The Crown Prince has returned to Berlin from Homburg, and will remain here until the 25th, when he will leave with the Empress for Baden. The duties of reconstruction will now take place under the Crown Prince, who is said to be perfectly competent to the task. The Emperor has personally and moved his residence from Versailles to Berlin, and has given his attention to the minutest details of the army. Invitations to dinners and receptions from all the most exclusive people in London have been so showered upon him that he has been embarrassed to make selections. Sir and Mrs. Blaine were the recipients of attention at Gladstone's ecclesiastic garden party. Gladstone was very excited in his attentions to Blaine. He grasped both his hands in greeting. Blaine held quite a court, nearly all of the guests present being in a prominent. Blaine was asked by Prime Minister Salisbury to attend a reception given by him during the week at the Foreign Office in honor of visiting royalties. Blaine declined the invitation. This invitation was of a most cherished, and Blaine's reasons for declining the invitation are not known, but doubtless he felt that his presence there after the controversy with Salisbury over the Irish question would have been subjected to a misconstruction. Salisbury's course in the past shows also that he is acting here friendly of the United States. Blaine's friends are delighted at his refusal to accept Salisbury's hospitalities under the circumstances. Various attempts have been made to prejudice Lincoln leaders to get Blaine to take part in the political complications on this side, but he has steadily refused, and has maintained a dignified reserve.

I called upon Mr. Blaine last evening for the purpose of asking his opinion of the English situation. He was looking in excellent health and spirits. He was in a very happy mood and seemed to enjoy his visit to England and to the many attentions which had been showered upon him. Mr. Blaine is certainly an able diplomat. He never allows himself to criticise the political performances of his opponents or to say anything a person might not say in the presence of the public. He is very reticent in regard to the political situation in England, but he did say enough that one of the first steps of importance which Parnell will undertake will be the introduction of a measure for the permanent improvement of Ireland's industries and resources. Mr. Blaine is very hopeful that the future will witness the settlement of the Irish question, and has confidence that Parnell will be the leader who will accomplish it. He says that Parnell's statesmanship during the recent trial has been remarkable in the admirable self-restraint he has exercised.

I asked Blaine to give me his opinion on Gladstone Salisbury's invitation. He declined to talk on so delicate a subject.

Pope and his colleague, Tom, who is being tried with him for their lives, both deserted their counsel in the middle of the trial, and refused to have anything more to do with the case. Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, who presided at the trial, ordered the jury to find a verdict of guilty against both prisoners, and they were accordingly convicted. Pope was sentenced to be hanged, and Tom to imprisonment for life. Both men have appealed to the Queen for mercy, and their friends are actively engaged in getting petitions signed asking for a commutation of their sentence.

THE RAPIDS WRECKED.

Complications Concerning the English-Egyptian Convention—King Mivert's Plans.

LONDON, June 21.—[New York Times Cable.]—No doubt be the last time I am to see, and something dear to record, such social complications are arising that a good agent to observe the local political conditions. The report that France and Russia had joined in demanding a month in which to consider the convention was verified yesterday, but the circumstance upon which the report was based were going on to a good deal of serious thinking. Gladstone, Parnell, Morley, and the other leaders of the Irish party, and Chamberlain, Goschen, Hartington, and Courtney, of the Liberal Unionists, are all in London, and are in constant communication with each other. Gladstone is said to be very much pleased with the attitude of the Irish party, and Parnell is reported to be very much pleased with the attitude of Gladstone and the Liberals during the trial. The persistent efforts which were made by the Gladstonian leaders and Mr. Parnell to obtain the adjournment of the Parnellites, as a party, to a common line of opposition with the Gladstonians have totally failed, so that the Gladstonian leaders are still confronted with the factious and hitch of their enemies. Mr. William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. John Morley advocate the policy of encouraging the Irish members of the Opposition upon the chance which grant the Tories to invest the power to prohibit at assemblies at will, and which establish permanency for the action of the bill. The bulk of the Parnellites prefer to pursue their old policy of obstruction. The usual influence of the London members of the municipal corps of legislators of the House of Commons, and the numerous other matters and questions which are to be dealt with during the session, are causing the Gladstonian leaders considerable embarrassment. The Government of the day is anxious to gratify the wants of the Tory faction, and to suppress those parts of the report stage of the bill. The Gladstonians will place a number of speech with a view of preventing the Government from carrying out their programme. There is no doubt that the bill will eventually become a law, and the Gladstonian leaders will endeavor to secure a short session for the purpose of passing the bill, and the Parnellites will probably aid the Gladstonian leaders in their efforts to secure the passage of the bill. The Government will endeavor to secure the passage of the bill, and the Gladstonian leaders will endeavor

Mr. Gerard used to tell a story about Gen. Grant, who was living one day at the Corcoran Art Gallery, where the latter happened to be particularly rash. "Here, John," said Grant to a servant standing near him examining a picture, "John, take this button and put your weight like that button strongest that side there." John took the plate, held it up to his nose a moment with the air of a connoisseur, then put it back again in its place and observed in a deep voice: "Mighty fine paint; that is the strongest button in the house."—Harper's Bazar.

A Man Fancies Rabbits.

A Chester (Pa.) woman struck a gusher the first month in oil she had her well broken up. She filed another and persisted in sitting, but her cover had accidental observers, and again came to the rent. The poor lone lorlean is accordingly cast out for a material hope fiendish relief, with a drooping head, seated on an old well. Her fate is for the sighing and hair pinner gone to Pittsburgh with the dry wash brush. Where they get her oil she has kept dark.—Boston Globe.

Not at all Unusual.

They were telling a story at all that U.S.G is probably as good as ours. It was about a poker game of a mixed character. In the crowd of players was one who had the extreme peculiarity of being one-eyed, a matter looking glass. The betting was high, when a tall stern man, arose and put his hand suggestively on his revolver. "Gentlemen," said he, "there's one man at this table who has got to quit playing, or quit life. I don't wish to spoil your game, nor to make an unusual proposition, but if this gentleman don't stop playing I'm going to shoot the man with one eye and he'll be dead."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Mysterious Noise.

A number of horses got into together at Independence. A few days ago a load of alfalfa hay was brought and put in the yard over the stable; one horse was kept in the yard, the other two being left out. After eating a few days the horse in the yard began to show signs of illness, which in a short time developed into the most violent symptoms of colic. The animal would lie down, get up, paw the ground, and roll over and over in the most violent manner. Every effort was made to relieve the animal, but all to no avail, and he died in great agony. The other two horses showed no signs of illness, and are still alive and well. The mystery is, what caused the death of the one horse?—Sage (Ark.) Independent.

A Pig That Catches Fish.

C. G. McConnell of Charlottesville, Ind., is the owner of a pig that he values very highly. It is a full-blooded Berkshire shoat, about 1 year old. The matter is a sensible one, and seems to understand every word that is spoken to it. Among its many accomplishments is that of fishing, at which it is an expert. It will have a position in a little stream running near Mr. McConnell's house, and by standing motionless for hours at a time will capture a number with ease. When he has caught enough for his dinner, he will bring a fish to his master, and then lie down and wait for more. This operation he will continue as many as the needs. Sometimes he will bring a fish to his master and then refuse to eat it, preferring to catch his own. This is very unusual for a hog, as they are not noted for their love of fish. Mr. McConnell values the pig very highly, and has refused a handsome offer for it.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Wise Wicked Fight.

"Our regiment did a great deal of fighting during the war," says E. P. Congdon in the Cincinnati Times-Star. "About the hottest fight we ever got into was on Missionary Ridge. We were close enough to the Rebs to shake hands with them, and they fought like devils incarnate. We knew we had to stand every thing that could be given us, and we were ordered not to fire a gun. Well, we stood it for a while, and finally we got mad. Then we began to load our guns and fire at will. We were ordered not to do it, but the order was disobeyed. We kept firing as fast as we could load and fire, and we mowed down the Rebs in front of us like grass before the scythe. Finally they broke and ran, and we after them. We chased them down the hill, and then they rallied and came back at us. We had to fall back to the top of the hill, and there we stood and fought them off. We held the position, and the Rebs finally gave it up. We lost a good many men, but we killed more than we lost. I tell you that was a wicked fight."

Training the Colt.

In the days when the Rocky Mountain Express Company had about a dozen horses on the road, giving a good example to human soldiers in their government. The boss driver of the division for that road was a man named Bridger, a big, fine specimen of a man, who had been employed by the company from the very start. Bridger had a habit of breaking in the colts himself, and he had a way of his own that was peculiar to himself. He would take a colt, and the breaking, which was done with the greatest patience, would commence. Bridger would put the colt in the harness with a horse that was gentle, and would drive him around for a few days, until the colt would stand without any trouble. Then he would put on a little heavier harness, and put the colt in with a horse that was not so gentle, and would drive

Brief Sketches of the Paragons, Fellowes, Bohemians, Tippecanoes, Quitaphilla, Hiawathas, Ogdens, Evanstons, Lions, Calumets, Hyde Parks, and Douglas—Plans Proposed Object to Make Chicago a Great Rowing Center.—Other Subjects.—The Rowing Regatta.

There is about a great race in Chicago whose superior figure, broad chest, active movements, and bright eyes are to a large extent attributable to daily exercise with the oar. The benefits of rowing are recognized the world over, and above all the colleges of repute, which traverse the words of praise to a high degree, are exactly careful that while the rivalry between the boys shall not exercise (which, Cambridge, Yale, Harvard, Cornell, and all the rest of the noted seats of learning have boat-clubs or other athletic associations, and many young men who enter their colleges with poor health and a low power have developed upon the world specimens of perfect health, qualified to enter the race for wealth and position unhampered.

Chicago has for years had a number of boat-clubs, but all were independent and there was no unity of action or mutual benefit. The active boating that has been done by the Portages, Delaware, Fullers, Tippecanoe, and Evanston Clubs finally led to a meeting looking to an association was the result, and, being favorably considered by all, on September, 1886, the "Chicago Navy" was organized, taking all the clubs of the city and suburbs into one body. The membership is composed of twelve clubs, the Portages, Fullers, Tippecanoes, Evanstons, Bohemians, Quitaphillas, Hiawathas, Ogdens, Douglas, Hyde Park, and Lions. The navy officers are as follows:

In just about a month from now Chicago clothiers will inaugurate their annual clearing sale of summer goods at "immense reductions." You'll have such tempting offers made you of suits which are seasonable now, but won't be then, and the "slaughter" be fairly "blood-curdling"! But, alas, it will come too late for you. THE HUB takes time by the forelock and starts in NOW. Like Jay Gould, it's a little lame, and so starts early to make sure. Every patron has been struck with the beauty and elegance of THE HUB'S finest Dress and Business Suits, selling along like hot cakes at $22, $25, $28, &c., and considering the quality, style, and cut (equal to the finest merchant tailors' productions) remarkably cheap at those figures. Well, THE HUB has already begun its clearing sale, and these Suits, positively the finest that can possibly be produced, are cut to $20 Each.

Have you ever known the time when you could buy the best Suit in Chicago for $20? Well, you may never again have the chance. Or perhaps it's a Ten-Dollar Suit you're thinking of, or a Twelve, or a Fifteen? If so take a bee line for THE HUB, where the Suits now reduced to these figures are perfect marvels of cheapness and excellence. None such ever offered at these prices. All got up to sell at 50 per cent higher.

Competition stands aghast and lets THE HUB have its own way.

5,000 Men's and Boys' Pants at reduced prices—that will cause a stampede to THE HUB.

CONFESSIONS OF A THIEF.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL.

Experiences in Various Juvenile Reformatory Institutions—How He Was Trained to Steer from Pantomimists—Station House Customs at Joliet, but Very Little of It on the Other Prisons—Michigan City the Worst of All—The Life of a Convict Not a Happy One.

I propose to tell the true story of my life. It is a story of crime and of penal servitude, but it is exactly what I have seen, experienced, and suffered. My name is Joseph Howard, and I was born in Lynn, Mass., July 5, 1860. Both my parents were natives of Massachusetts, and are still living. I have also brothers and sisters, but none of my family are any of my relatives, so far as I know, have ever been guilty of crime. I received a common school education, and when in years of age committed my first crime by stealing a watch. I was not arrested, but soon after, in June, 1875, I went to Lynn and was put at work in the Hamilton Mills. That summer, with some other boys, I had practiced several times, was arrested, pleaded guilty, and sent to the Massachusetts Reform School at Western, sentenced to stay there until I would be 21 years old. When our first entered this school he is stripped of, washed, and examined, and a description put on to book. He is then dressed in a gray uniform suit and at work. There are three grades, the first called No. 3, the second No. 2, and the third the grade of honor. Promotions are mentioned as No. 3 boys have not, they are promoted to No. 2, and are another year before advancing them to the grade of honor. Grade of honor boys have no prison privileges than the others, have better food, eat at a different table, are put in supervision of the boys of the other grades, and are permitted at times to go out. I was put at work sewing shoes during the first of that time. I can tell that the work, on the whole, or anything connected with the establishment, and the first two or three months that occurred (January, February, and the latter part of 1875) I was in the shoe shop. During the summer I was transferred to the tailor shop, where I remained until I was discharged. I was then put at work in the kitchen and dining room, and remained there until I was discharged. I have no desire and practice quite before College Night, and was discharged in the first class, June, 1876, when I was put in.

I have but few things I feel sorry for thought of leaving an honest, self-supporting life. The crimes I had committed were due largely to the temptations of others, and to my own weakness and recklessness. Anyhow, I had associated with some companions who were not to be trusted, and I was not to be trusted. I was not to be trusted, and I was not to be trusted. I was not to be trusted, and I was not to be trusted. I was

THE SMELTING OF SILVER.

DIFFERENCE BY WHICH SILVER BULLION IS DISTINGUISHED FROM BASE.

A Visit to the Bare Silver Company's Refinery—The Vessel from the Mine to the Mint—Secret Antimony Separated from the Shining White Metal Through the Agency of Heat—The Silver Pressure of Refining—Silver and Gold in the Dust.

Refining of silver bullion is an interesting process, and one not generally known. A visit recently made to the Bare Silver refinery, at the corner of Thirty-fifth and Clark streets, afforded an opportunity to witness the work of separating the precious metals. The works are the most extensive of the kind in this section, and when in full operation employ hundreds of men, and turn out immense amounts of silver that is shipped direct from the refinery to the mints. This refinery was formerly located at the corner of Lumber and Twelfth streets, being first opened in 1870. In order to secure more room the works were removed to their present location.

The Bare Silver Mine, whence the bullion is shipped to the refinery in this city, is located about 250 miles southwest of Salt Lake City and is in Nevada. It is owned by Eastern capitalists, and is rated among the four-time silver-producing mines of that section, though when first opened and for several years thereafter the ore was taken out by primitive methods. The low hoisting shafts gave way to the modern systems and steam power machines. The products of the Bare Silver Mine are lead, silver and gold, though but small quantities of the latter metal are obtained.

After the preliminary ore bill the presence of silicon in the rough metal necessitates the use of a good many of the old-fashioned methods in the subsequent treatment of the ore. The process consists in combining the silicon with the lead contents of the ore, and passing the resulting product through the refining furnaces necessary to free it entirely from the base metals, and retain the precious metals contained in solution in the lead bullion, and retain the latter for use in order to extract it of its domestic contents.

The ore is first roasted in the blast furnace or smelting furnace. This is a revolving mass of fire-brick and steel, with arrangements for feeding in the ore and fuel at the top, and for drawing off the molten metal at the bottom. The ore is roasted in this furnace, the sulphur contained in the ore passing off in the form of sulphurous acid gas, which is carried off by a large flue to the smoke stack. The ore is then ready for the next process, which is that of smelting. This is done in a blast furnace, which
